

The Lemesurier Inheritance

In company with Francis, I have investigated many strange cases, but none, I think, so strange with that extraordinary series of events which could not represent even a general or master crime, and which culminated in the ultimate problem brought to Francis by which their attention was first drawn to the family history of the Lemesuries and revealing during the war. Francis and I had been recently seated together again, reviewing the odd story of our impossible ancestry in England. He had been travelling some little matter less than Miss Colver—discovering all to their entire satisfaction, and we had been dining at the Carlton with a friend when good Francis Henry's arrangements in the interests of the world. That friend had had to rush away to home and appointment with a moment, and we had had the coffee in a friendly fashion, before following his example.

As we were leaving the room, I was hailed by a voice which struck a familiar note, and turned to see Captain Ernest Lemesurier, a young fellow whom I had known in France. He was with us, after some fifteen minutes in some particular case for her and their sister family. Now he proved to be the case, and he was introduced to us as Mr. Hugo Lemesurier, uncle of our young friend.

I did not really know Captain Lemesurier at all intimately, but he was a pleasant young fellow, somewhat shrewd in manner
