DNA

(1) What deoxyribonucleic acid is a nucleic acid that contains genetic information and instructions that code for traits. The structure, function, development, and characteristics of all living organisms is written in the code in DNA. (DNA is a double-stranded molecule in the shape of a double helix.)

(2) Nucleotides are the building blocks of DNA. Each nucleotide consists of deoxyribose sugar, a phosphate group, and a nitrogenous base. The sugar and phosphate from neighboring nucleotides bond together to form the sugar-phosphate backbone of DNA. There are four types of nitrogenous bases in DNA: adenine (A), thymine (T), cytosine (C), and guanine (G). These bases pair with each other in a specific way: A pairs with T, and C pairs with G. Neighboring bases pairs that hold the two complementary strands of the double helix together.

(3) The sequence of base pairs contains the genetic code, which determines the traits of an organism. This genetic code is transcribed into RNA, which is then translated into proteins. Proteins are the building blocks of life and are responsible for a wide variety of biological processes.

(4) DNA is found in the nucleus of eukaryotic cells and in the cytoplasm of prokaryotic cells. It is packaged into structures called chromosomes, which are tightly coiled strands of DNA. Chromosomes that carry one set of chromosomes are called autosomes, and chromosomes that carry two sets of chromosomes are called sex chromosomes.

View the diagram in the right-hand side of the following:

- A nucleotide consists of deoxyribose sugar, a phosphate group, and a nitrogenous base.
- A sugar phosphate backbone runs down each side of a DNA molecule.
- Bases are complementary to one another.
 - A pairs with T
 - C pairs with G
