Split Yellow Peas Recipe:

Upcycling Legume Water: from wastewater to food ingredients Luca Serventi, 2020-04-16 Food manufacturing generates an incredibly high volume of wastewater. The legume industry is one of the top contributors to this environmental issue as soaking and boiling are necessary to transform dried legumes into cooked canned products and other legume based products such as soymilk, tofu, hummus, and flours. Wastewater must be treated prior to disposal into the environment, thus raising production costs for the food industry. In addition, wastewater contains nutrients that are lost from the food chain after disposal. As water and soluble nutrients are becoming a limited resource, it is critical to optimize food manufacturing at all levels. Recycling Legume Wastewater Into Food Ingredients presents a sustainable solution to this increasing demand for food and water. The text analyses the composition of legume wastewater and its physicochemical properties, including its potential applications in emulsifiers, foaming agents, gelling agents, and antistaling ingredients. Early chapters discuss the processing of legumes and the wastewater generation involved. Further sections focus on wastewater generated by soaking and cooking, including the composition, functional properties, and food applications involved in each. Sprouting water, bioactives, and applications in edible packaging are also discussed. In presenting a sustainable solution for legume wastewater use, this text is an important key to sustainability in food processing and the reduction of waste. Dr. Mao's Secrets of Longevity Cookbook Maoshing Ni, 2013-01-01 The international bestselling author of Secrets of Longevity shares seventy-five simple and delicious recipes for living a healthier, happier, and longer life.
