Morris,William Allen Gibson,William Marshall Leavitt,Shana Campbell Jones,2013-09-26 The nation s approach to managing environmental policy and protecting natural resources has shifted from the national government s top down command and control regulatory approach used almost exclusively in the 1970s to collaborative multi sector approaches used in recent decades to manage problems that are generally too complex too expensive and too politically divisive for one agency to manage or resolve on its own Governments have organized multi sector collaborations as a way to achieve better results for the past two decades We know much about why collaboration occurs We know a good deal about how collaborative processes work Collaborations organized led and managed by grassroots organizations are rarer though becoming more common We do not as yet have a clear understanding of how they might differ from government led collaborations Hampton Roads Virginia located at the southern end of the Chesapeake Bay offers an unusual opportunity to study and draw comparative lessons from three grassroots environmental collaborations to restore three rivers in the watershed in terms of how they build organize and distribute social capital deepen democratic values and succeed in meeting ecosystem restoration goals and benchmarks This is relevant for the entire Chesapeake Bay watershed but is also relevant for understanding grassroots collaborative options for managing protecting and restoring watersheds throughout the U S It may also provide useful information for developing grassroots collaborations in other policy sectors The premise underlying this work is that to continue making progress toward achieving substantive environmental outcomes in a world where the problems are complex expensive and politically divisive more non state stakeholders must be actively involved in defining the problems and developing solutions This will require more multi sector collaborations of the type that governments have increasingly relied on for the past two decades Our approach examines one subset of environmental collaboration those driven and managed by grassroots organizations that were established to address specific environmental problems and provide implementable solutions to those problems so that we may draw lessons that inform other grassroots collaborative efforts Service Manual, 2001, 2002, 2003 Volvo
