

Philippine Foreign Policy (PHILFOR)
2nd Term AY 2014-2015
S.C. Madrona, Jr., Ph.D.

Course Description

This course includes literature on foreign policy analysis and Philippine foreign policy. The course is intended to introduce students to some of the major theoretical explanations of how states conduct their foreign policies, arranged in terms of the levels of analysis framework – external approaches related to broad international relations theories, governmental-organizational approach, societal approaches in terms of diversionary theory of war and public opinion and interest groups, and individual psychological approach to foreign policy. Prior to discussing Philippine foreign policy, the course will examine how the foreign policy making of developing states have been discussed in the literature. The course focuses more on the decision-making instead of foreign policy outputs, examining the various actors involved in the process, the nature of their interactions and the constraints facing them in the formulation of foreign policy.

Course Objectives

At the end of this course, the student should be able:

1. To characterize and differentiate periods of Philippine diplomatic history, and to know what each period has contributed to the development of Philippine foreign policy.
2. To identify the sources of change and stability in foreign policy formulation and implementation.
3. To analyze foreign policy prerogatives both in the governmental and nongovernmental sector and situate them in the foreign policy process

Intellectual Property and the New International Economic Order Sam F. Halabi, 2018-04-19 In economic sectors crucial to human welfare agriculture education and medicine a small number of firms control global markets primarily by enforcing intellectual property IP rights incorporated into trade agreements made in the 1980s onward Such rights include patents on seeds and medicines copyrights for educational texts and trademarks in consumer products According to conventional wisdom these agreements likewise ended hopes for a New International Economic Order under which wealth would be redistributed from rich countries to poor Sam F Halabi turns this conventional wisdom on its head by demonstrating that the New International Economic Order never faded but rather was redirected by other treaties formed outside the nominally economic sphere that protected poor countries interests in education health and nutrition and resulted in redistribution and regulation This illuminating work should be read by anyone seeking a nuanced view of how IP is shaping the global knowledge economy

Addressing Contemporary Public Health

Challenges in Ghana for Improved Outcomes: Getting to SDG 3 Delanyo Dovlo, Kwasi Torpey, Irene Agyepong, Evelyn Ansah, Eugene Nyarko, 2024-12-24 In 1978 Ghana was a participant in the Alma Ata meeting on primary health care and was an early adopter of its ideals. However, like most developing countries, it has made efforts to strengthen public health as a way of ensuring the conditions in which its people can be healthy and productive. The evolution of the public health in the country involved core assessments, policy development, and the implementation of interventions to address its policy objectives. The process of strengthening public health policy and interventions over the past four and more decades has hinged on evidence generated through research at the local and international level. The documentation of interventions to address contemporary health issues is a critical plank for the health practice to policy continuum; it catalyzes the country response to the myriads of public health issues confronting it. Many lessons have accrued for the country's communities to enhance the promotion, restoration, and maintenance of health even as the disease burden evolves from one of infectious and communicable diseases and maternal and child health to an increasingly sophisticated triple burden incorporating non-communicable diseases.

The Trade Policy Review Mechanism Mathias Kende, 2018-02-09 The WTO's Trade Policy Review Mechanism, which reviews the trade policies and practices of each WTO member at regular intervals, is generally considered to function well. In this day and age, complacency is unwise. Examining trade policy reviews throughout the lifetime of the TPRM, this book details its evolution from Article X of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to the proposed modifications resulting from the mechanism's latest appraisal examining the budgetary capabilities and technical performance of all the main entities who participate in the reviews. On the basis of these considerations, the author concludes that in order to remain relevant, especially in times of increased global protectionism, the TPRM could and should do better and provides unique and timely suggestions for reform.

Geoinformatics and Atmospheric Science Tomasz Niedzielski, Krzysztof Migala, 2017-09-09 This volume presents recent developments in atmospheric sciences driven by numerical modeling, which makes use of geospatial technologies and increasing computational power. It gathers examples of how geoinformatics supports meteorological, climatological, and water-related studies. One of the most important features of geospatial technologies is that they provide methods and tools which may be utilized in real time or near real time in order to monitor and predict atmospheric processes. This is particularly crucial in areas where dynamics of atmospheric phenomena is considerable and causes difficulties in accurate forecasting. One of such areas is the transitional zone between oceanic and continental features of the mid-latitude climate. Good examples of investigations into the transitional zone come from Poland and its neighboring countries. The topical volume provides the reader with a selection of papers on physically based and data-based modelling of weather-related phenomena over Poland. This main theme of the topical volume is extended to cover case studies on the use of geoinformatics in atmospheric studies in other regions at a range of spatial scales.
