

STAAR Science Tutorial 30 TEK 8.8C: Electromagnetic Waves

TEK 8.8C: Explore how different wavelengths of the electromagnetic spectrum such as light and radio waves are used to gain information about distances and properties of components in the universe.

The Electromagnetic Spectrum

- Electromagnetic energy is a form of energy that can move through both matter such as air or water, as well as the vacuum of space. The model that scientists use to best describe electromagnetic energy is a transverse wave (shaped much like a non-breaking ocean wave), though it also behaves somewhat like a particle, because it comes in packets of energy of a particular size.
- Each form of electromagnetic energy has a particular range of wavelengths and frequencies. Wavelength is the distance between one wave crest and the next. Frequency is a measurement of how many waves pass a point in one second. The shorter the wavelength of the electromagnetic energy, the greater the frequency, and the greater the energy contained in the wave.
- The forms of electromagnetic energy that we are most familiar with are light and radio waves. We use our eyes to see and interpret light, the only part of electromagnetic energy we can sense directly. Humans have developed many instruments to create, use and detect the other forms of electromagnetic energy. We use radio waves to transmit television and telephone signals. We use microwaves to cook food and detect storms (radar). We use x-rays to see inside our bodies.
- All electromagnetic energy travels at a constant speed when moving through a particular "medium"—a kind of matter. The so-called "speed of light" is the speed of any electromagnetic wave in a vacuum, without interference with matter. That speed is very fast, about 300,000 kilometers per second. This constant speed allows scientists to use light to measure distance. See Tutorial 31: Light-Years. As the medium becomes denser, the speed becomes slower. Some mediums block parts of the electromagnetic energy spectrum completely, while others do not. For example, light cannot pass through the cover of a book, but radio waves and x-rays can.
- Humans rely on our ability to see light to interpret and understand our world. Using technology, scientists have extended their ability to see the Universe, by turning the other forms of electromagnetic energy, called the electromagnetic spectrum, into either light or sound.
- The diagram below shows the entire electromagnetic spectrum, with the visible light portion near the center of the spectrum magnified below. (For those reading this on a black-and-white copy, the color names are labeled.) The waves at the left side of this diagram have the most energy and shortest wavelengths, while the

Embracing the Song of Appearance: An Psychological Symphony within Staar Science Tutorial 34 Tek 8 9c Answers

In a global used by monitors and the ceaseless chatter of instant transmission, the melodic splendor and emotional symphony created by the published word often diminish in to the background, eclipsed by the constant noise and interruptions that permeate our lives. However, set within the pages of Staar Science Tutorial 34 Tek 8 9c Answers an enchanting literary prize overflowing with fresh emotions, lies an immersive symphony waiting to be embraced. Constructed by an elegant musician of language, that interesting masterpiece conducts readers on an emotional journey, skillfully unraveling the concealed tunes and profound impact resonating within each carefully constructed phrase. Within the depths of the moving assessment, we shall discover the book is main harmonies, analyze its enthralling writing design, and surrender ourselves to the profound resonance that echoes in the depths of readers souls.
