Lobbyists and the Making of US Tariff Policy, 1816–1861 Daniel Peart, 2018-10-01 The first book length study of lobbying prior to the Civil War Since the 2008 global economic crisis historians have embraced the challenge of making visible the invisible hand of the market This renewed interest in the politics of political economy makes it all the more timely to remind ourselves that debates over free trade and protection were just as controversial in the early United States as they have once again become and that lobbying then as now played an important part in Lincoln s government of the people by the people for the people In Lobbyists and the Making of US Tariff Policy 18161861 Daniel Peart reveals how active lobbyists were in Washington throughout the antebellum era He describes how they involved themselves at every stage of the making of tariff policy from setting the congressional agenda through the writing of legislation in committee to the final vote Considering policymaking as a process Peart focuses on the importance of rules and timing the critical roles played by individual lawmakers and lobbyists and the high degree of uncertainty that characterized this formative period in American political development The debate about tariff policy Peart explains is an unbroken thread that runs throughout the pre Civil War era connecting disparate individuals and events and shaping the development of the United States in myriad ways Duties levied on imports provided the federal government with the major part of its revenue from the ratification of the Constitution to the close of the nineteenth century More controversially they also offered protection to domestic producers against foreign competition at the expense of increased costs for consumers and the risk of retaliation from international trade partners Ultimately this book uses the tariff issue to illustrate the critical role that lobbying played within the antebellum policymaking process

The President, the State and the Cold War James Bilsland, 2015-02-11 US foreign policy during the Cold War has been analysed from a number of perspectives generating large bodies of literature attempting to explain its origins its development and its conclusion However there are still many questions left only partially explained In large part this is because these accounts restrict themselves to a single level of analysis either the international system or the structure of the state and society The first level of analysis focusing on the role of individuals has largely been excluded This book argues that structural theories and any approach that limits itself to one level of analysis are inadequate to explain the development of US foreign policy Instead it is necessary to incorporate the first level of analysis in order to bring human agency back and provide a more detailed explanation of US foreign policy Bilsland proposes an analytical framework which incorporates presidential agency into a multi level analysis of US foreign policy during the Cold War constructing a multi level case study comparison of the foreign policies of Presidents Truman and Reagan He argues that the worldview of the president is central to agenda setting in US foreign policy making and that the management style of the president influences both decision making and the implementation of US foreign policy Evidence to support this is drawn from detailed empirical analysis of Truman's foreign policy of containment in Korea and Reagan's foreign policy of rollback in Nicaragua This work will be of interest to students and scholars of US Foreign Policy US History and International Relations
