... when they believed Philip as he proclaimed the good news of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women. ~Acts 8:12

Message from Seth Ross, President and Executive Director

This year, I turn 50 years old, and the General Conference turns 100 years old. I was born in 1971, and the General Conference was "born" in 1921. As of today (I'm writing this on my birthday), I'm officially half as old as the Church of God General Conference. For some people, turning 50 years old triggers a mid-life crisis. They may sense that the best years are behind them, and it's all downhill from there. Not so with me. I have a great deal of optimism about where I am in life and where I'm headed. The future holds so many opportunities and possibilities. My boys are growing into young men, and my marriage continues to evolve and deepen. My faith gets richer and more meaningful with every passing year, and the Lord provides me with a greater sense of peace and perspective, even as the world around us continues to fall apart in many ways.

In Bob Buford's book, Halftime: Moving from Success to Significance, he suggests that mid-life doesn't have to be a crisis. In fact, the second half of your life can be better than the first. To accomplish this, a few things he suggests doing include:

- Take stock of your successes and accomplishments thus far
- Redefine significance and what it means to you
- Identify your personal goals
- Develop a mission for serving God in the second half of your life

Not only is this applicable to my personal life, but these are valuable exercises for an organization such as the General Conference. We turn 100 years old this year. Is this our halftime? Maybe. Maybe not. Regardless, we can use our first 100 years to catapult us toward significance in our next 100 years. Here's how we can apply these halftime adjustments.

Take Stock of Our Successes and Accomplishments Thus Far

At this summer's General Conference, we will be celebrating our first 100 years as we launch into our next 100 years. As the saying goes, "You can't know where you're going if you don't know where you've been." Over a year ago, we sent letters to our churches asking them to each write a history of their congregation. We've been receiving your written histories and compiling them into a 100th anniversary book to be published later this year. Your stories are our story, and our story is a story of God at work through people preserving and spreading truth. We ought to celebrate those who have gone before us, not as an end in itself, but as an inspiration to those of us continuing on and to those who are coming along behind.

After Joshua led the Israelites across the Jordan, God directed him to have a man from each of the twelve tribes take up a stone from the middle of the Jordan. "Each of you is to take up a stone on his shoulder... to serve as a sign among you. In the future, when your children ask you, 'What do these stones mean?' tell them that the flow of the Jordan was cut off before the ark of the covenant of the Lord. ... These stones are to be a memorial to the people of Israel forever" (Joshua 4:5-7, NIV). It is important that we mark and remember past accomplishments and God's faithfulness.

Redefine Significance and What It Means to You (And Your Church)

The General Conference is a network of independent churches who collectively share core doctrinal truths. Each local church is led by Christ (not the denomination), and God calls each church to accomplish particular things in a particular place. Every church is unique. The combination of each church's people, gifts, talents, experiences, and relationships mixed with the surrounding community and its local culture, needs, and issues creates opportunities for that congregation to be the hands and feet of Christ in that place for this time. What is primary to one church may be secondary to another. How does your church define significance? How do you assess whether your congregation is fulfilling God's calling for you? This 100th anniversary year is a great time for your church to pray through what God is calling you to accomplish in your town at this time. What is truly significant for you and your church in the eyes of God?
