These authors also suggest that the use of a single, non-validated questionnaire to assess the prevalence of depression in the community is likely to overestimate the prevalence of depression. This is because the questionnaire used in the study was not validated and therefore the results may be biased. It is important to note that the results of this study are based on a cross-sectional design. Therefore, the causal relationships between the variables cannot be definitively established. Future research should employ longitudinal designs to investigate the temporal relationships between the variables and to assess the stability of the findings over time. Additionally, the study was conducted in a specific cultural context, and the results may not be generalizable to other cultures or populations.
