Essays on Labour Markets

Sebastian Buhai,2008 Three Essays in Development Economics David Russell Hansen,Gabriela Calderon

Guemez,2011 This dissertation is composed of three chapters All three deal with topics in development economics The first chapter examines the effects on village institutions of introducing formal financial institution options into the village The second addresses the effects of government policy on educational investment and crime The third tests the explanatory power of various explanations of the gender gap in math test scores The first chapter examines the effects of a transition from a traditional economy based on an uncertain source of income with risk fully insured away by one s neighbors in a social network through costly network ties to a modern economy in which some agents have access to partial insurance at a lower cost A theoretical model is used to show that village social networks can break down as some members of the village no longer need the insurance the social network provides producing a reduction in welfare if the costs of reducing moral hazard are not too high for at least some individuals and possibly the village as a whole This loss of welfare can occur even when networks provide other benefits to those belonging to them and is likely to be heterogeneous depending on the opportunities and networks available to individuals This paper tests these predictions using Indonesian data to examine the effect of a change in the banking institutions available to a community on the strength of social networks measured by community participation and welfare measured by household expenditure and by child health The analysis finds that changing financial institution availability in general does not influence community participation or welfare but that financial institutions that primarily serve certain groups do relatively reduce the welfare of households not in those groups which is consistent with the hypotheses generated by the model Crime is an important feature of economic life in many countries especially in the developing world Crime distorts many economic decisions because it acts like an unpredictable tax on earnings In particular the threat of crime may influence people s willingness to invest in schooling or physical capital The second chapter explores the questions What influence do crime rates and levels of investment have on one another and How do government policies affect the relationship between investment and crime by creating a simple structural model of crime and educational investment and attempting to fit this model to Mexican data A method of simulated moments procedure is used to estimate parameters of the model and the estimated parameters are then used to carry out policy simulations The simulations show that increasing spending on police or increasing the severity of punishment reduces crime but has little effect on educational investment Increased educational subsidies increase educational investment but reduce crime only slightly Thus one type of policy is insufficient to accomplish the goals of both reducing crime and increasing education The third chapter is joint work with Prashant Bharadwaj Giacomo De Giorgi and Christopher Neilson Boys tend to have better performances than girls in mathematical testing in particular there are significantly more boys than girls among high achievers and the score distribution appears to have a longer right tail for boys We confirm such results on several low and middle income countries In particular we find that the gender gap is already present by age 10 and substantially increases by age 14 and 15 We propose and try to test a series of explanations for such a gap i parental investment ii ability iii school resources iv individual investment and effort not tested directly v competitive environment and vi cultural norms We conclude that none of our proposed explanations can account for a substantial portion of the gap

Essays on Language in Societal Transformation Tunde Opeibi, Josef Schmied, Tope Omoniyi, Kofo Adedeji, 2015-01-30 This paper generally lends support to the arguments advanced by Awonusi 1989 1990 2004 and others in favour of an endonormative as opposed to an exonormative standard for English pronunciation in Nigeria They include the fact that the existing exonormative standard British Received Pronunciation RP has undergone and is still undergoing changes in its homeland and is not homogeneous The heightened social mobility of today's world perhaps works against the demarcation and homogenization of language varieties and this is all the more true of the varieties or lects that have been proposed for Nigerian English when these are related more or less explicitly to educational attainment Major attention is given in the paper to a schema of basilect mesolect and acrolect presented by Ugorji 2010 with a focus on his account of vowels and his presentation of a mechanism derived from optimality theory for evaluating vowels in contention The basilect and the mesolect are found to be so close to each other that they might be combined There would then be just two varieties In contrast the acrolect is close to British RP albeit with many variants due to the conflict of two standardising forces i e British RP and the basilect mesolect The vowel system of an officially adopted endonormative standard Nigerian RP would mainly be the same as that of British RP but the optimality mechanism could be employed to give preference to some of the Nigerian variants for inclusion in it

Hybrid Media Activism Emiliano Treré, 2018-12-07 This book is an extensive investigation of the complexities ambiguities and shortcomings of contemporary digital activism The author deconstructs the reductionism of the literature on social movements and communication proposing a new conceptual vocabulary based on practices ecologies imaginaries and algorithms to account for the communicative complexity of protest movements Drawing on extensive fieldwork on social movements collectives and political parties in Spain Italy and Mexico this book disentangles the hybrid nature of contemporary activism It shows how activists operate merging the physical and the digital the human and the non human the old and the new the internal and the external the corporate and the alternative The author illustrates the ambivalent character of contemporary digital activism demonstrating that media imaginaries can be either used to conceal authoritarianism or to reimagine democracy The book looks at both side of algorithmic power shedding light on strategies of repression and propaganda and scrutinizing manifestations of algorithms as appropriation and resistance The author analyses the way in which digital activism is not an immediate solution to intricate political problems and argues that it can only be effective when a set of favourable social political and cultural conditions align Assessing whether digital activism can generate and sustain long term processes of social and political change this book will be of interest to students and scholars researching radical politics social movements digital activism political participation and current affairs more generally

Recent Developments in Alcoholism Marc Galanter, 2013-11-11 From the President of the Research Society on Alcoholism The field of alcohol research has been slowly but continuously evolving taking into its domain an ever increasing array of scientific disciplines This series is designed to fill the need for a review publication that covers the broad range of research into alcohol actions and alcoholism Research in alcohol concerns social epidemiological and legal concerns in addition to biomedical and behavioral topics to greater degree than research with many other drugs A publication devoted to alcohol research should serve the broadest existing research community but perhaps more important it should also provide a means to recruit new investigators with fresh approaches to the field We can and must demonstrate that legitimate high quality research is being done but we must also highlight the opportunity for new workers to make a real impact on the problem The Research Society on Alcoholism seeks to provide such a service not only through this publication but also through other activities Richard A Deitrich Ph D Archaeological Theory in Practice Patricia Urban,Edward Schortman,2019-03-04 Many students view archaeological theory as a subject distinct from field research This division is reinforced by the way theory is taught often in stand alone courses that focus more on logic and reasoning than on the application of ideas to fieldwork Divorcing thought from action does not convey how archaeologists go about understanding the past This book bridges the gap between theory and practice by looking in detail at how the authors and their colleagues used theory to interpret what they found while conducting research in northwest Honduras This is not a linear narrative Rather the book highlights the open ended nature of archaeological investigations in which theories guide research whose findings may challenge these initial interpretations and lead in unexpected directions Pursuing those novel investigations requires new theories that are themselves subject to refutation by newly gathered data The central case study is the writers work in Honduras The interrelations of fieldwork data theory and interpretation are also illustrated with two long running archaeological debates the emergence of inequality in southern Mesopotamia and inferring the ancient meanings of Stonehenge The book is of special interest to undergraduate Anthropology Archaeology majors and first and second year graduate students along with anyone interested in how archaeologists convert the static materials we find into dynamic histories of long vanished people Social Media and Society Dr. R. B. Konda, Dr. Maheshkumar M. Ganwar, Dr.Gayatri Y., Prof. Basvaraj Hugar, Dr. Surendra Kumashi, Dr. Kalpana Bhimalli & Dr. Sameena Sindageekar,2024-11-08 This research paper examines Empowering Voices The Role of Artificial Intelligence in Amplifying Women s Activism on Social Media in India the influence of social media on women s activism in India highlighting its role in amplifying voices fostering community and mobilizing support for gender related issues Utilizing qualitative methods including interviews with women activists and social media content analysis the study identifies key themes in contemporary digital activism The findings reveal that social media has empowered women to challenge societal norms and advocate for rights notably through movements like MeToo and the Shaheen Bagh protests However the paper also addresses significant challenges such as online harassment and the need for intersectional representation Overall this research underscores the transformative potential of social media in shaping women s activism while advocating for safer digital spaces for all activists The rise of social media has significantly transformed the landscape of activism across the globe In India women activists have leveraged these platforms to amplify their voices mobilize support and challenge societal norms This paper explores the influence of social media on women s activism in India focusing on its role in raising awareness fostering community and facilitating grassroots movements Through qualitative analysis this research highlights key case studies explores various social media
