

Accounting cycle 1-8

- 1. Identify accounts affected by each transaction
- 2. Determine debits and credits for each account

1. Analyze each transaction to determine which accounts are affected and how they are affected (debit or credit). This step involves identifying the accounts involved in each transaction and determining whether each account is debited or credited.

2. Determine the debit and credit amounts for each account. The total debits must equal the total credits for each transaction. This step involves calculating the amount to be debited to each account and the amount to be credited to each account.

3. Journalize the transactions. This step involves recording each transaction in the journal in chronological order. Each entry should include the date, a brief description of the transaction, and the debit and credit amounts.

4. Post the journal entries to the ledger. This step involves transferring the debit and credit amounts from the journal to the appropriate T-accounts in the ledger.

5. Calculate the ending balances for each account. This step involves summing the debits and credits for each account to determine the ending balance.

6. Prepare a trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts and their ending balances to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits.

7. Adjust the trial balance. This step involves making any necessary adjustments to the trial balance, such as correcting errors or recording adjusting entries.

8. Prepare the financial statements. This step involves using the adjusted trial balance to prepare the income statement, balance sheet, and other financial statements.

9. Close the books. This step involves transferring the net income or loss from the income statement to the retained earnings account and closing the temporary accounts.

10. Prepare the post-closing trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts and their ending balances after the closing process to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits.

11. Prepare the financial statements for the next period. This step involves repeating the accounting cycle for the next period.

12. Review the financial statements. This step involves reviewing the financial statements to ensure that they are accurate and complete.

13. Prepare the closing entries. This step involves recording the closing entries to transfer the net income or loss to the retained earnings account.

14. Prepare the post-closing trial balance. This step involves listing all the accounts and their ending balances after the closing process to ensure that the total debits equal the total credits.
